FUNK'S TRIAL BEGUN

The Jury Agreed Upon Late Yesterday Afternoon.

OPENING STATEMENT BY GOVERNMENT

Tilt Between Counsel Over the Summoning of a Witness.

jury the trial of Frank W. Funk, indicted for the murder of William H. Brooks the 23d of June, 1898, began this morning be-fore Justice Cole in Criminal Court No. 2. Soon after the session opened the govern-ment presented to the jury a statement of case from its standpoint. The introduction of testimony was then undertaken and continued throughout the day. Every chair in the court room was occupied, and scores who desired to attend the trial as spectators were denied admittance, in order that the room might not be overcrowded.

The deepest interest in the proceedings was manifested by all, and particularly by the defendant, who listened attentively to every word spoken, leaning forward at times so as not to miss a sound. Funk was unquestionably calm, collected and entirely unquestionably calm, collected and entirely at ease. He smiled at intervals during the opening address in behalf of the prosecution, especially when the references to him were marked and bitter. He conversed frequently with Deputy Marshal Springmann, in whose custody he is from the time of leaving the jail in the morning until the return there in the early evening. The Jury Secured. The jury was completed at 4 o'clock yes-erday afternoon. The twelve men placed under oath to decide the fate of Funk are Messrs. Emil Spahn, Albert Browning, Joseph H. Gibbons, William S. Anderson, Peter F. Leapley, Charles P. Sherzer, Si-Peter F. Leapley, Charles P. Sherzer, Simon Archer, Chester M. Butler, Lemuel F. Lusby, Robert T. Patterson, John T. McKeon and Jonathan Clock. The jury retired, in charge of Deputy Marshals Garrison, Turner and Stutler. A moment later the first tilt between counsel occurred.

Attorney Baker asked the court for an order summoning a certain witness for the defense at government cost. He explained that the knowledge of the whereabouts of this witness was lacking until yesterday, and therefore his name had not been included in a list of witnesses ordered summoned by the court a week or more ago. The individual in question, Mr. Baker further said, at present resides in Baltimore, and his testimony will be most important, tending to show that the defendant was at some distance from the scene of the alleged murder at the time it is said to have been committed.

The court intimated that the desired order would be signed, unless some objection should be offered by the United States attorney. The latter promptly entered objection, his ground being that the application of Mr. Baker should have been in writing. The court then suggested that Mr. Baker submit the application in writing this morning. Mr. Baker remarked that the only thing gained by the objection was putting the defense to the trouble of writing out the motion. A moment later the representatives of the government asked for the name and address of the witness referred to.

"As the United States attorney's office has been so small in this small matter," said Mr. Baker, with spirit, "the defense will also be small. We decline to supply you with the name and address."

The United States attorney suggested to the court that the remarks of Mr. Baker were improper and uncalled for. Justice Cole, in reply, announced that the attorneys for the defense had the right to withhold the information if they saw fit. Attorney wolf, however, handed to the prosecutors a slip of paper on which was written the information relating to the identity and whereabouts of the Baltimore witness, remarking, "I wish it understood that I concur fully in the remarks of Mr. Baker as to the smallness of the United States attorney's office."

"It matters little what you think of the smallness of the office," retorted Assistant United States Attorney Taylor.

"Perhaps not," added Mr. Baker, "beyond going to show that the opinion is unanimous." The court intimated that the desired order before the introduction of testimony was begun this morning. The jury, which had been locked up all night, was escorted into the room, and without further ado Assistthe room, and without further ado Assistant United States Attorney Taylor addressed the twelve men. He said that for a great many years prior to June, 1898, William H. Brooks resided with his wife and two daughters at 914 22d street, a two-story frame dwelling. Brooks was seventy three years of age, a veteran of the Mexican and the civil wars, and for nineteen years had been a messenger, employed in the War Department. About 5 o'clock the afternoon of June 23, 1898, he said, the daughters left the house, leaving Mr. and Mrs. Brooks there. They did not return until after the crime was a reality. A gentleman, who was an old friend of the family, called and entered the house. He saw no one, but heard a groan emanating from a small room in the rear of the house on the first floor. The door to this room the visitor found bolted securely on the outside. The door was opened and the visitor discovered Mr. Brooks lying in a pool of his own blood. Mrs. Brooks was also on the floor, bady injured and unconsclous, Assistance was summoned. Mr. Brooks was dead. Mrs. Brooks was removed to the Emergency Hospital, apparently in a dying condition. She recovered consciousness, however, and ultimately got well.

All witnesses were excluded from the room

Mrs. Brooks was possessed of a considerable sum of money, the assistant United States attorney went on to say, and kept it ant United States Attorney Taylor adness, however, and ultimately got well.

Mrs. Brooks was possessed of a considerable sum of money, the assistant United States attorney went on to say, and kept it in the house. That fact was known to Funk. His acquaintance with the Brooks family was brought about through his sister, who introduced him to one of the daughters of Mr. Brooks. The Sunday preceding the homicide, which occurred on Thursday, Funk called at the Brooks house, and advised Mr. Brooks to go to a hospital. The morning of the homicide he called to get some tools he had left. He partook of supper at his boarding house that afternoon, earlier than usual, and ate hurriedly. He also dressed in a manner different from that he was accustomed to.

Funk's Admissions.

Funk's Admissions. The jury was told that Funk has admitted that he proceeded directly to the Brooks house after eating his supper the day in question. The representative of the government further said that it would be proved that Funk later went to a store, bought a suit of clothes and proceeded to a hotel and registered as "Harry Nichoison, Cincinnati, Ohio." He was assigned a room, where he changed his clothes, and then left the city. The clothes he discarded were bloody. Funk has admitted that the clothes in question belonged to him.

The next day Funk was in New York city. He deposited about $1,200 or $1,300 in a bank there, giving his name as Edward Ball. Later he visited Altoona, Pa., and while there referred to a murder, the details of which were identical with those of the Brooks homicide. Funk was finally located at Columbia, Mo., where he was residing under an assumed name. After his arrest, so the assistant United States attorney explained to the jury, Funk made a statement tending to exonerate himself and incriminate one of the daughters of Mr. Brooks and a certain colored man. The whereabouts of the daughter mentioned from the time she left the house about 5 o'clock until she returned after the homicide, so it was said, would be explained to the surface of the satisfaction of the irry. The alleged ide, so it was said, would be explained to he satisfaction of the jury. The alleged connection of the colored man with the rime would also be disproved, according to

The First Witness.

The first witness was Harry W. Brewer, a surveyor. He identified certain plans re-cently made by him, to show the arrangecently made by him, to show the arrangement of the rooms in house 914 22d street. He was followed by Harry A. Wise, a photographer, who identified certain photographs showing front and rear views of the house. The photographs were taken by the witness.

The government next called Dr. Larkin White Glazebrook, deputy for the District of Columbia. Dr. Glazebrook performed the autopsy on the body of the deceased the morning of the 24th of June, 1898, at the morgue. According to the witness, the deceased was of delicate build and weighed about 120 pounds. Seven distinct injuries were found about the head, all, with the exception of one, being on the left side, and in a line. The length of the wounds were also similar, averaging one and a half to two and three-quarter inches in length. The wounds were clean and incised. Beneath each cut was a clean depressed fracture of the skull. In two or three instances the brain had been cut into, injured and torn. The cavity of the skull was filled with blood. Death was due to cerebral hemorrhage. The hemorrhage was caused by the injuries to the skull and brain. The man, otherwise, was in a fairly healthy condition.

At this point, 12 cclock, a recess was taken until 12.45 o'clock.

Received the First Blow.

Received the First Blow. Dr. Glazebrook, after recess, gave it as his opinion that Mr. Brooks was first struck, for the reason that no blood was descernible on his slippers. The room in which the crime was perpetrated is very small, and had any one else been badly ipsmail, and had any one else been badly injured before he was assaulted, the blood from the former, it was thought, would very likely have covered the floor to the extent of being touched by the shoes of another person.

The witness testified that the injuries on Mr. Brooks' head might have been inflicted by an instrument, such as an ax that was shown in court.

WANTED FOR MURDER

Arrest of Richard Thompson, Colored

Richard Thompson, colored, was arrested at Winchester, Va., yesterday for the authorities of Loudoun county, where he is wanted for murder. It is alleged that the prisoner and his brother, Harrison Thomp son, killed Town Sergeant Seaton at Middleburg about ten days ago. The alleged murderers, it is believed, crossed the Potomac river below Leesburg, as they were seen at Harper's Ferry shortly after the murder was committed. It was not known by the people of Harper's Ferry at that time that the murder had been committed. The prisoner has been turned over to Sher-iff Russell at Leesburg.

GRANT THE APPLICATION.

In an opinion based on the application of the Congress Heights Citizens' Association for permission to lease the old frame school house at Congress Heights, the attorney for the District today advised the Commissioners that they are authorized to grant the application.

The association, in making the applica tion, explained to the Commissioners that it desired to lease, at a nominal price, for a term of one or two years, the old frame chool house at Congress Heights, it being a term of one or two years, the old frame school house at Congress Heights, it being the intention of the association to organize at its own expense a night school for the benefit of the youth in the neighborhood, to be taught by teachers of the Congress Heights public school.

The matter was referred to the attorney for an opinion as to whether the request could be granted, in view of the following clause contained in the act of Congress approved March 3, 1883;

"That hereafter the public school buildings of the District of Columbia shall be used for no purposes whatever other than those directly connected with the public school system of the District."

The attorney says:

"I am of the opinion that this clause may fairly be construed to relate to buildings actually used for public school purposes. I am informed that the new school building at Congress Heights is now used for public school purposes, and that the old frame school house is vacant, and its use for school purposes is, and has been for some time, abandoned. Under these circumstances I am of the opinion that the request of the Congress Heights Citizens' Association may be granted."

It is understood the Commissioners will approve the opinion of their legal adviser, and will inform the association that they are prepared to make the lease.
